Historic Russia-America Showdown Ahead

UN Council Meet Tops Interest

Red Aide Booked For Chairmanship

LAKE SUCCESS, Aug. 1—The United States and Russia battle today to a historic showdown in the United Nations over Korea and Communist China, with the U. S. already having won the first diplomatic round.

Today marks probably the most momentous session in the five-year-old history of the Security Council as Soviet Delegate Jacob Malik takes the chairmanship for August—the first time in 29 weeks Russia has been present at the world body.

The drama of the late afternoon situation is heightened by the disclosure that Malik will deliver a two-hour statement on the conflict in Korea. In addition, the Soviet delegate will press for the admission of Communist China in the UN to replace the Chinese Nationalist delegation.

But the U. S. has anticipated that Russia will endeavor to make its return to the UN a sounding board for propaganda blasts against both the U. S. and the UN for the military intervention in Korea.

THE RETURN of Russia to the UN and the anticipated conflict with the U. S. has created an unprecedented demand for seats at the Security Council meeting. More than 25,000 applied for reservations in the tiny, 500-seat council chamber. Elaborate television and radio arrangements have been made to give partial coverage to today's meeting.

Yesterday the U. S. delegation beat Russia to the punch by presenting a resolution condemning the North Korean authorities for their continued defiance of the UN cease fire order. The resolution also calls on all nations to refrain from assisting the North Koreans and help prevent the spread of aggression.

It was too late for action then but Warren R. Austin, the U. S. representative, asked that the resolution be placed on the agenda for today's meeting.

As chairman of the Security Council, Malik has drawn up an

19-YEAR-OLD PRINCE IS NAMED

Leopold Abdicates Throne In Face Of Belgian Riots

BRUSSELS, Aug. 1—Leopold III, king of the Belgians, bowed today to his opponents in a dawn decision which turned the power of the monarchy over to his young son, Prince Baudouin. The move halted not only a threatened march on Brussels but possible revolution.

Political fever subsided slowly following Leopold's decision, made reluctantly only 10 days after he had returned from almost six years of exile, to turn monarchical powers over to the 19-year-old prince.

Socialist Leader Achille Van Acker told a Brussels mass meeting that a special plane will take Leopold out of Belgium "as soon as possible."

Political experts believe it will take a few days if not longer to arrange transfer of powers and the king's departure unless renewed strife compels a quick getaway.

Leopold's final decision was given to the Belgian people in a special radio message broadcast this morning.

CALLS WERE sent out by Socialist Party leaders, principal opponents of Leopold's resumption of the throne, to forego the planned march on the Belgian capital. Up until 1 p. m. this afternoon no massed march of workers such as had been originally threatened had materialized.

It was expected that many groups would not receive the call to quit the march in time, but it was believed that only a few thousand demonstrators actually would reach the capital as opposed to the originally estimated 50 to 100 thousand Socialists.

Small groups did manage to infiltrate through backroads and turned up in preparation for a mass meeting in front of the Trade Union Building in the center of Brussels.

The crowd in front of the building finally swelled to about 5,000 and loudly expressed disappointment over Leopold's refusal to abdicate outright.

The king agreed to relinquish his powers to Prince Baudouin for the time being and then to give up all claim to the throne when his son reaches the age of 21 if Belgium's three major political parties are in accord on the Belgian union.

BOOING THEIR leaders' demands for discipline and appeals that the workers now "put the royal question behind us," the mob shouted angry demands for actual abdication.

The front of the Trade Union Building still bore placards showing Leopold shaking hands with Adolf Hitler.

The principal objection of the Socialists to Leopold is that he surrendered the Belgian army to the Germans soon after the Nazis overran the lowlands in World War II.

Aussies Promise Combat Vets For Korean Duty

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Prime Minister Robert Gordon Menzies told Congress today that Australian and New Zealand "combat forces" of undisclosed number will be sent to Korea "within a few weeks as possible."

The Australian leader did not reveal how large a force is being prepared for action in Korea, but said it will be a "first class combat group."

Menzies told the House in a formal address that some of the troops will be forces now stationed in Japan, along with other men of "combat experience." He added that these Australian troops "would cooperate" with New Zealand forces.

Menzies said the Australian government realizes that because time is so short, it is more important to send a small force of experienced men to Korea now than wait and train a large group for service later.

LISBON, Aug. 1—The Portuguese cabinet was reshuffled today but Antonio de Oliveira Salazar remained as premier. Six new ministers were included in the new setup which was believed to be the result of the present world crisis.

MONDAY EVENTS WASHED OUT

Fairgoers Hope For Good Weather Balance Of Week

Rain cancelled out most Pickaway County fair activities Monday, including attendance.

Fair officials said, however, that events halted by the Monday downpour probably will be held Tuesday.

This means that harness racing enthusiasts will get double their money's worth Tuesday afternoon—if it rains no more. Races originally slated for Monday are to be sandwiched between events on the Tuesday and Wednesday cards.

And while rains might again mar the Tuesday showing, there would be two bright personalities on the grounds.

Fair board officials said they had been advised that Ohio's governor, Frank Lausche, and the state director of agriculture, Howard Faust, were to have arrived at mid-afternoon.

The rain Monday did not halt the 4-H livestock judging contest, although it did cause cancellation of the WLW Midwestern Hayride. Because of previous commitments, the hayride can not be presented at a later date in this year's fair.

The farm girl is Mary Farwell of Hampshire, Eng., who arrived Monday as guest of the county for a month.

The English lass will observe local agricultural outputs under the International Youth Exchange program, a program of the same type which has sponsored Darby Township's Betty Jean Riddle to a trip in Denmark.

Merle Thomas, associate county extension agent, accompanied the visitor through the 4-H Club portion of the fair during her first day here.

Miss Farwell is to live with Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Dearth of Salt Creek Township for the first half of her visit. Other accommodations will be made later.

She is scheduled to speak before the Thursday noon dinner meeting of Circleville Rotary Club.

EVENTS ARE DOUBLED UP

Plenty Of Action Slated For Harness Racing Fans

Harness racing fans at the 1950 Pickaway Fair had fingers crossed Tuesday as they gazed skyward wondering if there would be more rain which would postpone races.

The rains were sufficient Monday to call off all events. But officials hurried around, doubled up the contests and packed them into the Tuesday and Wednesday cards.

If rains should call off the Tuesday meeting, there still will be events scheduled for Wednesday, but at least a third of the original card would be washed out completely.

As of Tuesday noon, that day's card called for five races—all of two heats each to help make up for Monday's washout. Wednesday's card calls for four more events, three of them two heats and the fourth at three regulation dashes.

Entry lists carried in Monday's editions of The Circleville Herald remain unchanged. No horses can be added to these events although there could be some scratches.

WEDNESDAY'S overnight bookings were being drawn Tuesday noon.

The revamped card for Tuesday calls for a 28 Class Pace, the Two-Year - Old Pace stake, a 20 Class Pace, a Three-Year-Old Pace stake and a 20 Class Trot.

Wednesday's card calls for a 28 Class Trot, a Two-Year-Old Trot, a Free-for-All Pace (3 heats) and the Free-for-All Trot.

Wednesday also will be observed on the track as "Joe Wolfe Day."

The dean of Ohio harnessmen and a 84-year-old resident of Pickaway County, has given up active driving. However, he is scheduled to parade his favorite sidewheeler, Little Pat W, during the Wednesday afternoon program.

His favorite young driver, Lou Huber Jr., will drive Little Pat W, a 16-year-old campaigner whom young Huber says is "getting better instead of getting old."

Of major interest Wednesday will be the two free-for-all tests. Eight entries have been filed for the trot, ten for the pace.

It was in this type of event that the present local track records were set. The record for the trot is 2:05 2-5 while the pace mark is 2:05 flat. The records were set here during the 1948 county fair.

THE PACE MARK was set by Betty Brewer who dropped dead during a recent workout. Frontiersman set the trot record.

Yanks Regrouping For New Defense

TOKYO, Aug. 2—(Wednesday)—An advance group of the U. S. First Marine Division landed in Korea Tuesday to strengthen American Army forces resisting what was officially termed a Communist effort to "drive our forces into the sea."

A Red flanking spearhead was reported nearing a point only 25 miles from the cornerstone port of Pusan Tuesday night.

But General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said there is no longer any danger of a Dunkirk-type withdrawal from Korea by the four U. S. Army divisions now on the embattled peninsula.

A "slight withdrawal to planned positions" by American and South Korean troops was announced by MacArthur in a communique issued at 12:35 a. m. Wednesday.

The communique added "this was not a forced withdrawal but was planned for regrouping and effecting better disposition of United Nations forces."

MacArthur reported continued heavy enemy pressure in the Chinju area "as the Communists massed for the offensive" toward Pusan, the American supply port.

FRONT DISPATCHES reported a Red column had driven 10 miles east of Chinju and was hammering within 15 miles of Masan, only 25 air miles west-northwest of Pusan.

MacArthur said in other areas "pressure was slight except in the Kochang area where the enemy continued his effort to break through to Taegu."

Kochang is about 40 air miles southeast of Taegu, the South Korean provisional capital.

Fierce fighting still raged at Yongdok on the east coast, and MacArthur said "it is possible friendly forces (South Koreans) have again forced entry into the port city." He said an American observation pilot saw enemy troops occupying positions 1,500 yards north of the battered city.

President OKs Plan To Grant New Controls

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—President Truman told Congress today that he has no objection to standby price and wage controls and rationing powers but insisted he should be given full leeway in deciding whether to put them into effect.

The President, in a letter to Chairman Maybank, (D) S. C., of the Senate Banking Committee, and Chairman Spence, (D) Ky., of the House Banking Committee, laid down four conditions in case Congress insists on giving him the standby controls.

The conditions are:
1. These powers should be supplementary to and not in lieu of the "limited" controls which he has already requested.

2. Congress "cannot afford to bog down or delay" in passing the limited powers at once, and the standby authority should be added only if consideration of the legislation is not prolonged in either house.

3. Provisions relating to prices and wages "should not set up a rigid formula or freeze in advance of experience."

4. Any grant of standby price and wage controls should leave flexible and open the question of administration.

ur, who returned Tuesday evening from his flying trip to Formosa where he conferred with China's Nationalist Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, said the Americans in Korea have won their "battle for time."

He predicted failure of what he called the "suicidal" North Korean attempt to seize Pusan and push the Americans off the peninsula.

The Red invaders apparently were throwing their main weight into an enveloping sweep that reached Korea's southern edge and drove east along the coastal plain toward Pusan.

International News Service War Correspondent Frank Conniff, in a front dispatch received at 10:24 p. m. Tuesday, said a Communist column was within 15 miles of Masan.

A later dispatch by INS War Correspondent John Rich from a Korean southern port said at 11:19 p. m. that the Reds in the southern sector apparently have thrown "everything they had in" to the drive on Masan and Pusan.

RICH REPORTED that the enemy advance penetrated 10 to 12 miles east from Chinju, the junction captured by the invaders Monday. Thus the Communist spearhead, led by six to eight Russian-made tanks, had punched within 40 miles west of Pusan by late Tuesday.

An American officer, speaking of the Red troops engaged in the big flanking push, was quoted by Rich as saying "there are thousands of them." He described the situation as "confused," with the Communists infiltrating and outflanking American positions at the southern end of the front.

Enemy pressure elsewhere along the rectangle-shaped Korean front diminished somewhat after the U. S. First Cavalry Division made new withdrawals in the central sector defending Kumchon on the rail lifeline to Pusan. In the northeast sector, South Korean troops were driven out of the communications center of Andong.

The U. S. Marine advance party landed at a South Korean port to prepare the way for the expected arrival of crack troops of the First Marine Division, now enroute from the United States.

Rich quoted the commander of the advance party as saying the oncoming First Marine Division troops include numerous World War II veterans. Fifty percent of the officers and ten percent of the enlisted men saw combat action during the last war, the group commander said.

Rich quoted the officer as saying the Marines will take a tough attitude in the Korean fighting.

"We just do not intend to let anyone through our lines at night—refugee or not," the officer asserted.

Fallen Line Frightens Driver, Causing Mishap

One person was slightly injured Monday when fear of a fallen utility line caused a motorist to skid off the highway into a utility pole.

Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff said the accident took place Monday on Route 56 about one half mile south of Pherson.

He said that at this point a telephone line paralleling the highway crosses over to continue on the opposite side.

One of the wires was down and lying across the road when Mrs. Donald Smith, 1, of Orient Route 1 approached from the north during the rain Monday afternoon.

She told Deputy Radcliff she saw the fallen wire and applied her brakes. The car skidded on the slick pavement, whirled across the road into a utility pole, snapping it off.

A passenger in the Smith car, Mrs. Mary Smith, 26, of Orient Route 2 was injured slightly in the accident. She was treated for scratches and bruises by a Mt. Sterling physician. Another passenger, Mrs. Mary Smith's infant son, Blain, was unhurt, Radcliff said.

UN Probing Atrocities

PUSAN, Aug. 1 — The United Nations Commission for Korea declared today it is determined to punish the perpetrators of atrocities.

The commission announced here it is investigating all atrocity reports with a view to punishing offenders "as soon as possible."

UN Council Meet Tops Interest

agenda of his own which has the following two items:

1. Recognition of the representative of the Central People's Government of the People's Republic of China (Communist) as the representative of China.

2. Peaceful settlement of the Korean question.

But the United States is certain to insist that questions not completed at the last session of the council be taken up first.

RESULT IS almost certain to mean the U. S. resolution on Korea will be voted on first despite Soviet procedural wrangling. This will be a major diplomatic and political victory for the U. S.

Informed circles predict that the U. S. Korean resolution will receive a majority of nine votes with Yugoslavia abstaining and Russia vetoing it.

These same circles believe that the Soviet resolution admitting Communist China will go down to defeat, as will any Russian move offering mediation of the Korean war on terms other than the UN demand for cease fire and a withdrawal of the North Koreans behind the 38th Parallel.

Britisher Urges Plain Speech Use

Britain's chief law officer, Attorney-General Sir Hartley Shawcross calmly and publicly suggested that the man who invented the term "accommodation unit" for home "ought to have been shot."

The reason: "It probably lost us (the Socialist Party) 59,000 votes. And if it didn't it should have done."

Sir Hartley told a London Fabian Society luncheon that Winston Churchill was "quite right about it. It's the simple homely language that makes the deepest impression." He urged that in the next election plain issues should be put forward in plain English.

204 Tanks Out

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1 — The Defense Department reported today that American planes and troops definitely have destroyed a total of 204 North Korean tanks in more than a month of fighting in Korea.

County Fair News Briefs

wearing mud rubbers even before the first rain cloud appeared.

John Heiskell, fair manager-elect and president of Circleville Kiwanis club, is making sure that the bigwigs of his club attend the fair. He has scheduled a club directors meeting for 8 p. m. Wednesday—inside the fairground gates.

While all that rain was falling on the fairground track Monday, George W. VanCamp's huge oil truck, loaded to the brim with water for sprinkling the racing oval, stood quietly near the drawgate. . . and George sat inside a barn chewing fingernails.

Heiskell, who apparently sees a silver lining in every cloud, peered through the stream of rainfall and opined: "Well, you can be sure of one thing—if we have nothing else, we have on display some of the finest mud-holes in the state."

A new flower was used by Mrs. Lee Downs of Orient Route 1 for the winning corsage in the flower show. It was a gladiolus, often used in wedding bouquets. Gladiolus are made of the florets and petals of a gladiolus spike.

Although Monday's rain stymied most operations at the fair, 4-H Club boys and girls made the most of the downpour. During the heaviest of the showers, the youngsters paraded their potential champion cattle onto the washracks behind the showbarn and soaped them down, using the rain for wetting and rinsing.

Only one school exhibit has been entered in this year's fair. Pickaway Township school has set up a woodworking booth in the coliseum, showing the finest of the products turned out last year by its industrial arts classes.

Larry Best, county extension agent, cracked the whip continuously over county 4-H Club boys and girls Monday. His favorite chant over the PA system was: "All right, let's put our aislesways in fine shape. Saltcreek already has started on its work."

Sparrows battled the crowd attending Monday's livestock judging contest in the showbarn on the fairgrounds. The spunky

3 Rural Thefts Are Reported

Theft of a tractor battery and tools has been reported to Pickaway County sheriff's office by Carl J. Smith of Kingston, Route 1.

Smith told Deputy Sheriff Walter Richards the missing items were stolen sometime Sunday night. He valued the battery at $15, the tools at $35.50. Richards said the tools belonged to Forest Kreitsel of Kingston, who was threshing for Smith.

Another theft reported to the sheriff's office was of a necklace by Robert Leist of Circleville, Route 3. A third robbery report was received from Eldon Dennison, who complained that someone had stolen an undetermined number of chickens from his farm on Circleville Route 4.

birds hunkered on the ceiling braces to heckle announcers during the program.

Circleville American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps was impressed Monday by the ape show in the midway in the fairgrounds. While playing before the show, Baritone Player Jim Pickel gave an experimental thump on the side of the show wagon, moved up in formation when rewarded by a powerful thump from inside and a gorilla-sized howl.

UPSET CALCULATIONS

AS THE 12 nations making up the permanent North Atlantic Council assembled in London, there was none that could not read the handwriting on the wall. Its clear message was: "It is later than you think."

When the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty signatories met last May they didn't think it was so late. They were proceeding without delay but without haste, on the assumption that they would have close to five years to organize their defenses. The best military opinion said that Russia would require about that long to be ready for an all-out offensive effort; hence she would not risk war now.

She has risked war now. When she pushed the lever for aggression in Korea, she could not be entirely sure of avoiding war.
She took that calculated risk. And—here is where she upset the May calculations—she arranged matters so that if war came, she would have to fight only a defensive war. She considers herself sufficiently prepared to risk that.

Germany is potentially another Korea—split down the middle, clamoring for national unity, with a large Soviet-trained force in the East which Western Germany is unable to match. Russia could push another lever there, forcing the western powers to move in—and again sit back and do no fighting herself.

That is the prospect that faces the Atlantic Council. They hardly expect it to happen in 1950, but they can no longer feel sure it won't. They are quite sure of one thing: They have less time than they thought they had.

PRAVDA PROVES IT

It started in Stockholm and apparently Stockholm feels it should be the first to repair the blunder. Accordingly, there is a growing movement there, in fact in all Scandinavia, by signers to repudiate the notorious "peace resolution" for which a million signatures are claimed in the United States.

Unfortunately the Stockholm resolution still has defenders in this country who insist Secretary of State Acheson doesn't know what he is talking about when he says signers are either dupes or communists.
Since these alleged champions of peace refuse to believe Mr. Acheson, maybe they'll take Pravda's word for it. This house organ of the Kremlin says of the "Stockholm pledge" that all signers are so committed to the cause of peace that they are obligated to perform acts of sabotage in order to preserve it.

That ought to disillusion even the noisy fringe hereabouts which is intent upon defending a "resolution" that most signers apparently would be happy to forget.

Dr. Stanley Hornbeck used to be chief of the Far Eastern division of the State Department (1928-1937). From 1937 to 1944, he was adviser on political relations of the State Department. Then he was kicked out to make room for the Alger Hiss crowd; he was made our ambassador to The Netherlands, and then retired.

Hornbeck has been the leading Far Eastern expert of the United States since he went to the Versailles Conference in 1918. Those most familiar with China, Japan, Korea, the Philippines and such countries realize that Hornbeck's specialized knowledge is extensive, intimate and important.

At the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law last April, Hornbeck delivered an address which has just become available to me, in which appears the following:

"The United States withheld recognition of the Soviet government until a new administration here had become convinced that that government met most of the standard tests of what constitutes a recognizable government and that it would be reasonable and advantageous to accord it recognition. Then we laid down conditions; we asked and we were given pledges. And, even at that, we were deceived. The Russian Soviet government has disregarded both its general legal obligations and its particular pledges, including those made then to us and those made before and since to us and to other countries.

"There is little if any warrant for an expectation that, with or without recognition and with or without pledges, the performance of the Communist regime in China will differ very greatly from the performance of the Communist regimes in Russia and in other Communist countries. All Communists are committed to the destruction of persons and peoples, institutions and agencies which stand in the way of world domination by Communism. The Chinese Communists, whether they are or are not controlled by the Kremlin, are allies of the Kremlin. They imitate the Russian Soviet system, they use its methods and they follow the made-in-Moscow party line."

The particular purpose of Hornbeck's address was to discuss the recognition of Soviet China by the United States and the United Nations. Despite the war in Korea, this is not an academic question. Nehru of India is pushing Soviet Russia's demands for such recognition. Nehru is naturally scared of Russia which, moving out of China, Afghanistan and Mongolia, can overrun Pakistan and India as Genghis Khan did.

Nehru hopes that by playing the role of the honest broker, he might save India and even enhance its influence in international affairs. This has never succeeded with Soviet Russia. The best known example of the destroyed middle man is, of course, Jan Masaryk. It is generally forgotten that at the beginning of his career, Chiang Kai-shek played exactly that role in China.

Hornbeck brings this matter to a head in the following references:

Chaucer devoted a long poem to the theme that what women want most is power. This suggests that even in his day women had certain claims to equality with men.

Obtaining the maximum from the minimum is often upheld as a worthy goal, but if you expect to get it you have to give it.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

TANA HAD ridden away from Elisha Lund's place not once looking back, her face wooden and her thoughts a turmoil. On the buckboard beside her, Lund kept his huge hands on the reins and held silent, and they climbed a rise of ground and dropped over it. Tana's saddle trailing behind, Lund reached the road to Tamerlane and wheeled along it. Tana sat staring ahead, remembering lives tugging off his boots and dismissing her with that gesture, remembering Rod Benedict coming to help her into the buckboard and saying nothing, not even good-bye, though his eyes had been eloquent enough.

She shook inwardly; she had held herself serene for so long, so very long, that she wanted now to let loose and weep.

Lund broke his silence. Lund said, "He's a good man—a very good man."

She supposed he was speaking of Benedict, though she couldn't be sure and she didn't ask. She wanted no sympathy; sympathy would be her complete undoing, so she made her lips stiff and looked handsome and regal and self-contained, and she caught the distant glint of sunlight on barbed wire. Yonder lay Hammer, where cattle grazed. Lund looked in that direction. Lund's hard-paned features softened and his head moved with his smiling.

He said, "When you are young, you want to fight against things, to change the world to your way. It is so with my daughter. When you are older, you learn to sit back and let what is to happen happen. And one morning you wake up, and all the walls you been butting your head against have fallen down—just like the walls of Jericho."

Tana said, "Who wants to wait to be old?"

Lund shrugged. "Maybe the walls fall tomorrow. Maybe the next day. Maybe a year from now." He looked again toward Hammer. "That is why I do not hate your grandfather. He is butting against a wall. Meantime, I must try to save my people from folly. Only the land stays the same. All the rest changes, whether we want it or not."

She was strangely comforted; she looked at this man beside her and he was no longer alien, he was no longer an invader come to tear her world apart. He was wisdom and tolerance and patience; she wondered why she had never seen the philosopher behind the weathered face. He had no learning, not like Colonel Carradine's; he had no wealth. But he had learned the great fundamentals through the process of living, and thus he had amassed the greatest wealth of all. He had come to sense inevitably and to bow before inevitably and thereby defeat it. And, realizing this, Tana felt freed. What Elisha Lund had learned, she could learn likewise, and therein lay the freedom.

She said, "I never had a father to talk to."

His eyes clouded. "A man holds his children to him only so long. Then they walk their own way. Maybe, after a while, they come back."

She said, "The walls come tumbling down."

His beard twitched with his grinning. "Which one of us is supposed to be making the other feel better?"

She laughed. She said, "I'm glad I met you. So very glad."

Lund flicked the reins. "Soon now we're at Hammer."

"And you're coming into the house!" she cried. "You're going to sit with the colonel. And between you, you're going to settle this trouble for once and for all."

"That will be good," he said solemnly.

She began talking then, a pent-up flood of talk bursting free. She told of Texas and of the migration north; she told of Marco Stoll and Jim Ives and Dave Carradine and Tom Feather. She told all of the tale the colonel had told her ten years before when she had wept because Brian Ives had left. Lund gave her his quiet attention. Then she told of Rod Benedict, who had come to work for Hammer, and she confessed to moonlight rides the colonel hadn't known about; she confessed to stolen kisses. She talked freely; she had talked to no man in this fashion, and the talking was good.

Afterwards Lund said, "All the time you have looked backward, never forward. And you have been too much alone. That was not good."

He lifted his eyes. "Look. Here is the fork in the road!"

They turned northward toward Hammer; they rode in silence again, but it was a different kind of silence; it was a communion.

Tana felt warm inside; she felt fetteredless. They came into the shadow of one of the many cutbanks flanking this road, and the shadow was cool and comforting—until the gun spoke. The sound broke the silence sharply, and Elisha Lund sagged gently against Tana, blood on him; Lund died against Tana.

But for a moment there was still strength in him. He used it to haul at the reins, but perhaps that was some reflex beyond his bidding. His shoulder was against Tana's, and in this stunned moment she knew no fear nor even surprise; she'd been swept beyond those things. She got an arm around him; his eyes were already glazing, but in his last lucidity he could still measure and weigh, and he knew what had happened and what it could portend; she could read that knowledge in his eyes.

He said thickly, "It's lost now... everything..."

She knew what he meant, and she knew that even now he was selfless, concerned with how many men might die because he was dying, and she said, "No!" frantically. "I won't let it happen!"

Then he was dead.

Brule came sliding down the cutbank, gun in hand and his face wolfish, with his yellowed teeth showing. Tana knew him; she had seen him a time or two in Tamerlane and had heard him called by name, and she had listened to Ives' feverish babbling of his encounter with this same man. Brule had worked himself up to the killing pitch; moreover, fear was in him, and that was what made him really dangerous. He came to the buckboard and yanked at Tana's arm.

"Down, you!" he ordered.

He dragged her from the buckboard and, keeping a hold on her elbow, fetched her with him as he went about unfastening her horse from behind the vehicle. Lund's team was smelling blood and showing skittishness. Brule released Tana and grasped at the reins and brought team and buckboard around, facing them south. He slapped them hard with the reins and let them clatter away. Tana found her legs and turned to run; Brule pounced upon her. His hands were offensive; he got her to her horse and made her mount and produce pigging strings from his pocket and proceeded to lash her hands to the saddle-horn.

He looked to the north, the whites of his eyes showing, and she sensed the nature of his fear. Hammer's gate wasn't so far away, and the sound of the shot might have carried. He cursed her obscenely, then led her horse around the cutbank. On its far side, hidden from the road, his own mount stood with trailing reins. He climbed carefully into the saddle—

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Well, the wheel has spun once more and many a wife is tipping her hat to the grocer again.

The government is still undecided whether to let things get in a mess by themselves or let the OPA handle it.

All we know is that the money is out of the grocer's safe again, and the sugar is in there and all we can say for hoarders is that it's a good thing sugar isn't potatoes which can turn real mellow when not properly aired.

The nicest thing about this Korean situation is that it has given us something Henry Wallace can approve. With reservations.

For a while there we couldn't he was sum favoring his right leg—and began leading Tana's horse away from the road.

Bennett Cerf's
Try, Stop Me

When Sir Thomas Lipton died in 1931, he had never imbibed alcohol, smoked, gambled, nor married. Maybe that's why he was able to leave four million dollars to the poor of Glasgow in his will. Competitors say, however, it was because he was the smartest, slickest exhibitionist who ever entered the tea business. Sir Thomas's yachts (he financed five successive "Shamrock's") never once captured the international cup, but they won for his tea products about a hundred million dollars' worth of free publicity.

Will Rogers said, "Sir Thomas is probably the world's worst yacht builder but absolutely the world's most cheerful loser." Sir Thomas could afford to be!

According to Sir Thomas' biographer, Alec Waugh, his publicity was summed up in this one paragraph: "A man may have many friends, but he will find none so steadfast, so constant, so ready to respond to his wants, so capable of pushing them ahead, as a little leather-covered book with the name of a bank on its cover."

UPSET CALCULATIONS

AS THE 12 nations making up the permanent North Atlantic Council assembled in London, there was none that could not read the handwriting on the wall. Its clear message was: "It is later than you think."

When the foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty signatories met last May they didn't think it was so late. They were proceeding without delay but without haste, on the assumption that they would have close to five years to organize their defenses. The best military opinion said that Russia would require about that long to be ready for an all-out offensive effort: hence she would not risk war now.

She has risked war now. When she pushed the lever for aggression in Korea, she could not be entirely sure of avoiding war. She took that calculated risk. And—here is where she upset the May calculations—she arranged matters so that if war came, she would have to fight only a defensive war. She considers herself sufficiently prepared to risk that.

Germany is potentially another Korea—split down the middle, clamoring for national unity, with a large Soviet-trained force in the East which Western Germany is unable to match. Russia could push another lever there, forcing the western powers to move in—and again sit back and do no fighting herself.

That is the prospect that faces the Atlantic Council. They hardly expect it to happen in 1950, but they can no longer feel sure it won't. They are quite sure of one thing: They have less time than they thought they had.

PRAVDA PROVES IT

It started in Stockholm and apparently Stockholm feels it should be the first to repair the blunder. Accordingly, there is a growing movement there, in fact in all Scandinavia, by signers to repudiate the notorious "peace resolution" for which a million signatures are claimed in the United States.

Unfortunately the Stockholm resolution still has defenders in this country who insist Secretary of State Acheson doesn't know what he is talking about when he says signers are either dupes or communists. Since these alleged champions of peace refuse to believe Mr. Acheson, maybe they'll take Pravda's word for it. This house organ of the Kremlin says of the "Stockholm pledge" that all signers are so committed to the cause of peace that they are obligated to perform acts of sabotage in order to preserve it.

That ought to disillusion even the noisy fringe hereabouts which is intent upon defending a "resolution" that most signers apparently would be happy to forget.

These Days

Dr. Stanley Hornbeck used to be chief of the Far Eastern division of the State Department (1928-1937). From 1937 to 1944, he was adviser on political relations of the State Department. Then he was kicked out to make room for the Alger Hiss crowd; he was made our ambassador to The Netherlands, and then retired.

Hornbeck has been the leading Far Eastern expert of the United States since he went to the Versailles Conference in 1918. Those most familiar with China, Japan, Korea, the Philippines and such countries realize that Hornbeck's specialized knowledge is extensive, intimate and important.

At the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law last April, Hornbeck delivered an address which has just become available to me, in which appears the following:

"The United States withheld recognition of the Soviet government until a new administration here had become convinced that that government met most of the standard tests of what constitutes a recognizable government and that it would be reasonable and advantageous to accord it recognition. Then we laid down conditions; we asked and we were given pledges. And, even at that, we were deceived. The Russian Soviet government has disregarded both its general legal obligations and its particular pledges, including those made then to us and those made before and since to us and to other countries.

"There is little if any warrant for an expectation that, with or without recognition and with or without pledges, the performance of the Communist regime in China will differ very greatly from the performance of the Communist regimes in Russia and in other Communist countries. All Communists are committed to the destruction of persons and peoples, institutions and agencies which stand in the way of world domination by Communism. The Chinese Communists, whether they are or are not controlled by the Kremlin, are allies of the Kremlin. They imitate the Russian Soviet system, they use its methods and they follow the made-in-Moscow party line."

The particular purpose of Hornbeck's address was to discuss the recognition of Soviet China by the United States and the United Nations. Despite the war in Korea, this is not an academic question. Nehru of India is pushing Soviet Russia's demands for such recognition. Nehru is naturally scared of Russia which, moving out of China, Afghanistan and Mongolia, can overrun Pakistan and India as Genghis Khan did.

Nehru hopes that by playing the role of the honest broker, he might save India and even enhance its influence in international affairs. This has never succeeded with Soviet Russia. The best known example of the destroyed middle man is, of course, Jan Masaryk. It is generally forgotten that at the beginning of his career, Chiang Kai-shek played exactly that role in China.

Hornbeck brings this matter to a head in the following references:

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

TANA HAD ridden away from Elisha Lund's place not once looking back, her face wooden and her thoughts a turmoil. On the buckboard seat beside her, Lund kept his huge hands on the reins and held silent, and they climbed a rise of ground and dropped over it. Tana's saddle trailing behind. Lund reached the road to Tamerlane and wheeled along it. Tana sat staring ahead, remembering lives tugging off his boots and dismissing her with that gesture, remembering Rod Benedict coming to help her into the buckboard and saying nothing, not even good-bye, though his eyes had been eloquent enough.

She shook inwardly; she had held herself serene for so long, so very long, that she wanted now to let loose and weep.

Lund broke his silence. Lund said, "He's a good man—a very good man."

She supposed he was speaking of Benedict, though she couldn't be sure and she didn't ask. She wanted no sympathy; sympathy would be her complete undoing, so she made her lips stiff and looked handsome and regal and self-contained, and she caught the distant glint of sunlight on barbed wire. Yonder lay Hammer, where cattle grazed. Lund looked in that direction; Lund's hard-planned features softened and his beard moved with his smiling.

He said, "When you are young, you want to fight against things, to change the world to your way. It is so with my daughter. When you are older, you learn to sit back and let what is to happen happen. And one morning you wake up, and all the walls you been butting your head against have fallen down—just like the walls of Jericho."

Tana said, "Who wants to wait to be old?"

Lund shrugged. "Maybe the walls fall tomorrow. Maybe the next day. Maybe a year from now." He looked again toward Hammer. "That's why I do not hate your grandfather. He is butting against a wall. Meantime, I must try to save my people from folly. Only the land stays the same. All the rest changes, whether we want it or not."

She was strangely comforted; she looked at this man beside her and he was no longer alien, he was no longer an invader come to tear her world apart. He was wisdom and tolerance and patience; she wondered why she had never seen the philosopher behind the weathered face. He had no learning, not like Colonel Carradine's; he had no wealth. But he had learned the great fundamentals through the process of living, and thus he had amassed the greatest wealth of all. He had come to sense inevitably and to bow before inevitably and thereby defeat it. And, realizing this, Tana felt freed. What Elisha Lund had learned, she could learn likewise, and therein lay the freedom.

She said, "I never had a father to talk to."

His eyes clouded. "A man holds his children to him only so long. Then they walk their own way. Maybe, after a while, they come back."

She said, "The walls come tumbling down."

His beard twitched with his grinning. "Which one of us is supposed to be making the other feel better?"

She laughed. She said, "I'm glad I met you. So very glad."

Lund flicked the reins. "Soon now we be at Hammer."

"And you're coming into the house!" she cried. "You're going to sit with the colonel. And between you, you're going to settle this trouble for once and for all."

"That will be good," he said solemnly.

She began talking then, a pent-up flood of talk bursting free. She told of Texas and of the migration north; she told of Marco Stoll and Jim Ives and Dave Carradine and Tom Feather. She told all of the tale the colonel had told her ten years before when she had wept because Brian Ives had left. Lund gave her his quiet attention. Then she told of Rod Benedict, who had come to work for Hammer, and she confessed to moonlight rides the colonel hadn't known about; she confessed to stolen kisses. She talked freely; she had talked to no man in this fashion, and the talking was good.

Afterwards Lund said, "All the time you have looked backward, never forward. And you have been too much alone. That was not good."

He lifted his eyes. "Look. Here is the fork in the road!"

They turned northward toward Hammer; they rode in silence again, but it was a different kind of silence; it was a communion. Tana felt warm inside; she felt fetteredless. They came into the shadow of one of the many cutbanks flanking this road, and the shadow was cool and comforting—until the gun spoke. The sound broke the silence sharply, and Elisha Lund sagged gently against Tana, blood on him; Lund died against Tana.

But for a moment there was still strength in him. He used it to haul at the reins, but perhaps that was some reflex beyond his bidding. His shoulder was against Tana's, and in this stunned moment she knew no fear nor even surprise; she'd been swept beyond those things. She got an arm around him; his eyes were already glazing, but in his last lucidity he could still measure and weigh, and he knew what had happened and what it could portend; she could read that knowledge in his eyes.

She knew what he meant, and she knew that even now he was selfless, concerned with how many men might die because he was dying, and she said, "No!" frantically. "I won't let it happen!" Then he was dead.

Brule came sliding down the cutbank, gun in hand and his face wolfish, with his yellowed teeth showing. Tana knew him; she had seen him a time or two in Tamerlane and had heard him called by name, and she had listened to Ives' feverish babbling of his encounter with this same man. Brule had worked himself up to the killing pitch; moreover, fear was in him, and that was what made him really dangerous. He came to the buckboard and yanked at Tana's arm.

"Down, you!" he ordered.

He dragged her from the buckboard and, keeping a hold on her elbow, fetched her with him as he went about unfasting her horse from behind the vehicle. Lund's team was smelling blood and showing skittishness. Brule released Tana and grasped at the reins and brought team and buckboard around, facing them south. He slapped them hard with the reins and let them clatter away. Tana found her legs and turned to run; Brule pounced upon her. His hands were offensive; he got her to her horse and made her mount and produce piggish strings from his pocket and proceeded to lash her hands to the saddle-horn.

Tana said stonily, "Hammer will kill you for this!"

He looked to the north, the whites of his eyes showing, and she sensed the nature of his fear. Hammer's gate wasn't so far away, and the sound of the shot might have carried. He cursed her obscenely, then led her horse around the cutbank. On its far side, hidden from the road, his own mount stood with trailing reins. He climbed carefully into the saddle—

The government is still undecided whether to let things get in a mess by themselves or let the OPA handle it.

The nicest thing about this Korean situation is that it has given us something Henry Wallace can approve. With reservations.

For a while there we couldn't

4-H Club Girls Lauded For Outstanding Booths; City Unit Wins Top Honor

1949 Winner Is Edged Out

Pickaway County 4-H Club girls and their leaders again are providing the county fair with one of its most outstanding exhibits.

The 24 booths, taking up a good deal of space in the big fairground coliseum, offer interesting and varied displays. Projects in winning booths were largely Grade A work.

"Booths indicate careful beforehand planning," said Judge John Mount, assistant state 4-H Club leader, as he inspected the meticulously decorated booths.

Final 1950 judging found the one-two winners of last year's fair reversed.

This year, Circleville's Circle Sew Straight Club, which placed second last year, won top honors.

The 1949 first place winner, Saltcreek Valley Victory Stitches, was edged out this year and claimed second place ribbon.

Adult advisers for the Circleville club are Mrs. Berman Wertman and Mrs. Clyde Cook. This booth featured sewing projects in a booth well-marked by a green and white electrical sign that flashed on and off which gave the name of the club.

In the winning booth, the 1931 complete costume made by Ruby Ellen Thornton, which won both County and state award, was on display. In contrast was the 1950 complete costume made by Lois Cook. The cost of both exhibits was given. The 1931 complete costume was made at a total cost of $14.57. The 1950 costume had come to $42.88.

Saltcreek Victory Stitches 4-H club had a booth which featured a large motto in green and white—"To Make the Best Better"—as background for the Grade A projects on display. This 4-H club has stressed personality and good grooming. Under a poster which read "Appearance is the most important feature of your personality. Be well-groomed," were two dolls dressed to represent an ill-groomed person and a well-groomed person. Mrs. Leslie "earth and Mrs. Harley Lutz are club leaders.

Third prize was awarded to Jackson Jolly Stitches 4-H club for a booth centered with an enormous green four leaf clover on which many of the smaller projects were displayed. On one side of the booth was a sewing machine across which lay a dress on exhibit. On the other side was the educational feature, a scrap book with examples of various stitches, seams and finishings. The health hint concerned a bottle of poison which was not only carefully labeled but had pins stuck in the cork so that the user would be warned even in the dark.

Mrs. Fred Riggins and Mrs. Harry Kern are club advisers. Logan Elm Sunny Sewers received fourth place award. One feature of their display was the milk pasteurizing equipment for home use.

Advisers are Mrs. Frank Graves and Mrs. Philip Wilson. Bloomfield Busy Bodies 4-H club were fifth place winners with their combination of sewing and canned goods projects. Leaders are Mrs. Glen Rinehart and Mrs. Harold Accord. Walnut Sew and Sew placed sixth. Leader is Mrs. Fred Glick. Darby Flying needles were

What makes one diamond have several times the money-value of another diamond of like size?

These and many other puzzling questions are made clear to all who see this diamond evaluation exhibit—here in our window for one week only.

This diamond story is more than just interesting—it is valuable! It dispels many of the misconceptions about diamond values. It shows how today's scientific instruments in the trained hands of our Registered Jeweler of the American Gem Society, precisely measures all the elusive elements that establish gem-value... how each slight degree of color-tone lowers value... how each tiny imperfection, indiscernible in less than ten times magnification, reduces the gem's worth... how inaccuracies of cutting reduce brilliance and value.

4-H Club Girls Lauded For Outstanding Booths; City Unit Wins Top Honor

1949 Winner Is Edged Out

Pickaway County 4-H Club girls and their leaders again are providing the county fair with one of its most outstanding exhibits.

The 24 booths, taking up a good deal of space in the big fairground coliseum, offer interesting and varied displays. Projects in winning booths were largely Grade A work.

"Booths indicate careful beforehand planning," said Judge John Mount, assistant state 4-H Club leader, as he inspected the meticulously decorated booths.

Final 1950 judging found the one-two winners of last year's fair reversed.

This year, Circleville's Circle Sew Straight Club, which placed second last year, won top honors. The 1949 first place winner, Saltcreek Valley Victory Stitches, was edged out this year and claimed second place ribbon.

Adult advisers for the Circleville club are Mrs. Berman Wertman and Mrs. Clyde Cook. This booth featured sewing projects in a booth well-marked by a green and white electrical sign that flashed on and off which gave the name of the club.

In the winning booth, the 1931 complete costume made by Ruby Ellen Thornton, which won both County and state award, was on display. In contrast was the 1950 complete costume made by Lois Cook. The cost of both exhibits was given. The 1931 complete costume was made at a total cost of $14.57. The 1950 costume had come to $42.88.

Saltcreek Valley Victory Stitches 4-H club had a booth which featured a large motto in green and white—"To Make the Best Better"—as background for the Grade A projects on display. This 4-H club has stressed personality and good grooming. Under a poster which read "Appearance is the most important feature of your personality. Be well-groomed," were two dolls dressed to represent an ill-groomed person and a well-groomed person. Mrs. Leslie Earth and Mrs. Harley Lutz are club leaders.

Third prize was awarded to Jackson Jolly Stitches 4-H club for a booth centered with an enormous green four leaf clover on which many of the smaller projects were displayed. On one side of the booth was a sewing machine across which lay a dress on exhibit. On the other side was the educational feature, a scrap book with examples of various stitches, seams and finishings. The health hint concerned a bottle of poison which was not only carefully labeled but had pins stuck in the cork so that the user would be warned even in the dark.

Mrs. Fred Riggins and Mrs. Harry Kern are club advisers. Logan Elm Sunny Sewers received fourth place award. One feature of their display was the milk pasteurizing equipment for home use.

Advisers are Mrs. Frank Graves and Mrs. Philip Wilson. Bloomfield Busy Bodies 4-H club were fifth place winners with their combination of sewing and canned goods projects. Leaders are Mrs. Glen Rinehart and Mrs. Harold Acord. Walnut Sew and Sew placed sixth. Leader is Mrs. Fred Glick. Darby Flying Needles were

AMERICAN GEM SOCIETY'S DIAMOND EVALUATOR EXHIBIT

What makes one diamond have several times the money-value of another diamond of like size?

These and many other puzzling questions are made clear to all who see this diamond evaluation exhibit—here in our window for one week only.

This diamond story is more than just interesting—it is valuable! It dispels many of the misconceptions about diamond values. It shows how today's scientific instruments in the trained hands of our Registered Jeweler of the American Gem Society, precisely measures all the elusive elements that establish gem-value... how each slight degree of color-tone lowers value... how each tiny imperfection, indiscernible in less than ten times magnification, reduces the gem's worth... how inaccuracies of cutting reduce brilliance and value.

'Family Fair' Is Planned For Next Year

While the 1950 Pickaway County Fair was just beginning to take shape Monday, plans for the 1951 fair were being laid.

The plans were forthcoming from the productive mind of John Heiskell, newly-elected fair manager who will take over the reins Aug. 15 from Tom Harman.

"The 1951 fair is going to be a family fair," Heiskell prophesied. "We're going to have programs here that will give the homey, fun-producing atmosphere of the early fairs."

Heiskell's fertile brain already is hatching up, among other things, a 4-H Club girls' beauty contest, hog-calling contests and entertaining work with greased pigs.

In addition, the new manager hopes that some arrangement may be made by next fair time to provide picnic facilities for families who would like to come and spend the whole day.

The wife accuses the husband of extreme cruelty, citing that he has refused to live with her for three years.

100 Are Expected To Show Wares In Cycle Races

Nearly 100 motorcyclists are expected to compete for $900 in prize money and 10 trophies Friday during Pickaway Fair.

Time trials in the races, first of their type to be held here during the local fair, are to begin at about 11 a. m. Friday, while the actual nine-event racing card is slated to begin at 2 p. m.

The cycle races are sponsored by the Gypsy Roamers' Motorcycle Club of Circleville, and will be assisted in officiating during the racing program by the Springfield Pirates club.

None of the local club members are eligible to participate in the program, although all of them are expected to be present to handle the show.

Mayor Thurman I. Miller is scheduled to make trophy presentations following the races.

Ancient Clock Is Dug Up By City Firemen

They've hung an old timer in Circleville fire department.

"We dug him out of a cupboard under the stairs and hung him on the west wall in the back room," explained Fire Chief Talmer Wise.

It's an old advertising clock. The instrument is about six feet long, and, according to a date stamped inside the case, was purchased July 20, 1886.

"He's tickin' good now," said Wise.

He's doing more than that. Every five minutes a bell rings, and three panels depicting beach scenes turn over to present new viewpoints.

Chief Wise explained that there is no sand visible in the beach scenes, and no water. But the people are there, people with long hair and short suits.

Big Implement Display On Tap At County Fair

This year's Pickaway Fair boasts of one of the largest implement displays in the history of the show.

Almost the entire hillside just east of the coliseum building has been utilized by local implement dealers for display of the newest, mos. modern farm equipment available, while another area at the furthest eastern edge of the show also has been converted into an implement show area.

Eight Couples Advancing In Family Tourney

Eight couples have entered the quarterfinals of the family low-ball golf tournament in Pickaway Country Club.

The Art Marshalls and Harold Hotts are to meet in the first quarterfinals of the upper bracket of the family contest, while the George Speakmans and the Frank Wantzes will meet in the other top bracket quarter.

Bud Brehmers will meet the Bill Steeles in the first of the lower bracket matches, while Ed Ameys and Paul Adkinses will meet in the final quarterfinals pairing.

Semi-finals round of the match is to be completed by Monday, while the final, 18-hole playoff will be before Aug. 20.

the dealers are the self-propelling reapers of all types, along with huge freezing lockers, automatic post-hole diggers and the new, more powerful tractors, both diesel and conventional.

Along with the implement display are the home appliances for both farm and city homes. Many of the "wife-savers" are under canvas with the implement exhibits, while others are shown inside the coliseum.

Noticeably missing from this year's show are the hordes of television antennas which sprouted from the coliseum last year. Only a few scattered antennas are seen on the fairgrounds so far this year.

Friece Earns Berth In District Golf Tourney

Bob Friece of Circleville earned a berth in the second round of the district amateur golf tournament Monday in Columbus.

Friece registered a seven-over-par 79 during the opening round of the tournament at Scioto Country Club to make the second round.

The long-swatting golfer, elementary grade teacher in Corwin Street school, was scheduled to tee off at 2:18 p. m. Tuesday to make his bid in the second round. He was pitted against Pat Mathias of Twin Rivers and Joe Schurtz of Scioto.

Verlin Blankenship, another top-notch Circleville golfer, was eliminated from the district test Monday when he marked an 88-stroke card for the course.

Hatters Await Protest Hearing In Tournament

Top Hat softball team's forced protest showdown was postponed Monday night because of rain.

The Hatters Sunday launched a protest in a match against Army and Navy softballers, claiming the A and N hurler was ineligible.

Circleville's team was trailing by a 4-3 margin in the final inning with two men out and none on base when Manager Paul "Snow" Seymour ambled along the basepath with $10 protest money in his outstretched hand.

Harold Stonerock, Top Hat catcher, was delegated by Seymour to root out the facts to prove the ineligibility of the Army-Navy moundsman.

"I've got four aces in my hip pocket," said 'Rock.'

The protest showdown will be held Tuesday if the weather permits.

If Top Hat wins the protest it also will win the right to meet the J. H. Butt Co. in the finals of the winner's bracket.

If it loses the decision, it will meet Army and Navy in the final inning with two out and none aboard and Wilson Clark at the plate.

Mack Patterson, 24, of Michigan, $3 bond, arrested for running through a red light.

Charles E. Baker, 78, of Circleville Route 4, $10 bond, arrested for failure to yield the right of way in an auto accident that took place at the intersection of Main and Washington streets.

Driving the other car was Tournay A. Leist, also of Circleville Route 4. No one was injured.

3-Year Probation Period Levied By Judge Here

A 37-year-old Columbus man has been placed on three years probation by Judge William D. Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court.

He is William Griffith who entered a plea of guilty to malicious destruction of property by burning. He was arrested by sheriff's department for his connection with the burning of an auto near Duvall.

Terms of his probation are that he violate no laws, refrain from alcoholic drinks, stay out of Pickaway County, report once a month to the prosecuting attorney and pay $26.43 court costs.

Prosecutor Guy Cline delayed taking further action in a case against Griffith's wife, Emma, indicted on a similar count in the same offense.

2 Women Ask Local Court To OK Divorces

Two divorce actions have been filed in Pickaway County common pleas court.

A petition filed for Ruth Ann Sanders, a minor, by her father, Paul Voelker, asks for a divorce from Billy Earl Sanders, accusing him of extreme cruelty.

The couple was married Oct. 27, 1947, in Columbia, S. C. They have one child, aged 14 months. The wife asks for the divorce, custody of the child, alimony and allowance and a restraining order to keep the husband from disposing of property. The order was granted.

Second petition was filed by Nina L. Buskirk against Ned E. Buskirk. It states they were married March 26, 1919 in Circleville and have one child, aged 29.

The wife accuses the husband of extreme cruelty, citing that he has refused to live with her for three years.

100 Are Expected To Show Wares In Cycle Races

Nearly 100 motorcyclists are expected to compete for $900 in prize money and 10 trophies Friday during Pickaway Fair.

Time trials in the races, first of their type to be held here during the local fair, are to begin at about 11 a. m. Friday, while the actual nine-event racing card is slated to begin at 2 p. m.

The cycle races are sponsored by the Gypsy Roamers' Motorcycle Club of Circleville, and will be assisted in officiating during the racing program by the Springfield Pirates club.

None of the local club members are eligible to participate in the program, although all of them are expected to be present to handle the show.

Mayor Thurman I. Miller is scheduled to make trophy presentations following the races.

Ancient Clock Is Dug Up By City Firemen

They've hung an old timer in Circleville fire department.

"We dug him out of a cupboard under the stairs and hung him on the west wall in the back room," explained Fire Chief Talmer Wise.

It's an old advertising clock. The instrument is about six feet long, and according to a date stamped inside the case, was purchased July 20, 1886.

"He's tickin' good now," said Wise.

He's doing more than that. Every five minutes a bell rings, and three panels depicting beach scenes turn over to present new viewpoints.

Chief Wise explained that there is no sand visible in the beach scenes, and no water. But the people are there, people with long hair and short suits.

Big Implement Display On Tap At County Fair

This year's Pickaway Fair boasts of one of the largest implement displays in the history of the show.

Almost the entire hillside just east of the coliseum building has been utilized by local implement dealers for display of the newest, most modern farm equipment available, while another area at the furthest eastern edge of the show also has been converted into an implement show area.

Friece Earns Berth In District Golf Tourney

Bob Friece of Circleville earned a berth in the second round of the district amateur golf tournament Monday in Columbus.

Friece registered a seven-over-par 79 during the opening round of the tournament at Scioto Country Club to make the second round.

The long-swinging golfer, elementary grade teacher in Corwin Street school, was scheduled to tee off at 2:18 p. m. Tuesday to make his bid in the second round. He was pitted against Pat Mathias of Twin Rivers and Joe Schurtz of Scioto.

Verlin Blankenship, another top-notch Circleville golfer, was eliminated from the district test Monday when he marked an 88-stroke card for the course.

Football Coach Steve Brudzinski of Circleville high school Monday was nursing a bruised elbow and ribs a full three weeks before football practice begins.

The coach, one of the painting firm of Chilcote, Hardin, Seward and Mallett, toppled from a ladder at the Charles Walters farm east of Circleville Monday while painting the painting-carpeting trade.

"You know how coaches are," Brudzinski confided. "Clumsy."

Hatters Await Protest Hearing In Tournament

Top Hat softball team's forced protest showdown was postponed Monday night because of rain.

The Hatters Sunday launched a protest in a match against Army and Navy softballers, claiming the A and N hurler was ineligible.

Circleville's team was trailing by a 4-3 margin in the final inning with two men out and none on base when Manager Paul "Snow" Seymour ambled along the basepath with $10 protest money in his outstretched hand.

Harold Stonerock, Top Hat catcher, was delegated by Seymour to root out the facts to prove the ineligibility of the Army-Navy moundman.

"I've got four aces in my hip pocket," said 'Rock'.

The protest showdown will be held Tuesday if the weather permits.

If Top Hat wins the protest it also will win the right to meet the J. H. Butt Co. in the finals of the winner's bracket.

If it loses the decision, it will meet Army and Navy in the final inning with two out and none aboard and Wilson Clark at the plate.

Adkins Entry Booked Again

"Scarlet's Sister" of the Braeburn stock farm of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Adkins, won fourth place Sunday in the five-gaited class during the Lancaster Horse Show.

The animal this week will be entered in the annual Lucas County horse show in Lucasville.

County Lass Attends Fair In Denmark Covering 30 Acres

Betty Riddle Says 35,000 Attend Show

Danes Appreciate Marshall Plan

There is one Pickaway County lass who would like very much to take in the current Pickaway Fair.

But she won't make it.

She's too far away—about halfway around the world from Circleville.

She is Betty Jean Riddle of near Orient who now is in Denmark as a special American student there.

Miss Riddle, who sends her very best wishes to all concerned with the local fair, has been writing a series of letters to The Circleville Herald for her friends in Pickaway County.

In her "best wishes" she said: "I hope they have wonderful weather for the fair and I wish I could be there. I know it will be a fine show—especially for 4-H and FFA."

Then Miss Riddle tells a little about a fair she visited in Denmark. Her latest letter follows:

Recently I visited the horse show in Sonderborg with the Iversons (her hosts). It's called the "Ringriders Show" and is a very unusual test of skill.

A ring about 1½ inches in diameter is suspended from a string stretched between two high poles driven into the ground. The rider has a long, sharp stick about six feet long. He holds it in his left hand and canters up between the two poles and tries to get the ring on the stick. The champion rider for the show got 24 rings in 24 tries. Trophies are given plus money, badges and flowers. Four hundred men and horses were there for the event.

FOR THE KIDDIES, they have all sorts of rides—merry-go-rounds, swings, etc. They look like story book illustrations. One thing that seemed to amuse them was a new type of ride just invented by a German. It was like a barrel which is whirled around by an electric motor. When it reaches a certain speed, the floor drops out and you are left hanging on the wall.

All the time I was at the show, it was pouring rain. But all the Danes continued to walk around, the horse show went on and the amusements were going on full blast. It rains so often here that they stay in it just as if the sun were shining.

Would you like a few Danes for the (Pickaway) Fair in case it rains?

George Peterson is the director for ECA in Denmark and he and his wife and I went to a fair recently in Horsens.

ECA had a Marshall plan exhibit at the fair and we went through it along with our ambassador to Denmark, Mrs.

Anderson.

All had pictures taken. Present was a very active still camera man and a motion picture representative of March of Time.

Mrs. Anderson is without a doubt one of the most attractive and charming women I have ever met.

The Horsens fair covers thirty acres, and in six acres of that is every kind of machinery you could imagine. . . . Oliver, Case, International Harvester, Ford, Massey Harris, Ferguson, Minneapolis Moline and many others from the U. S., France, England, etc.

All machinery from the U. S. has a sticker showing that it was imported under the Marshall Plan. And without the Marshall Plan, Denmark would not be where it is today.

Ask any Dane. And they know more about the plan than the average American. . . . and they appreciate what is being done for them.

I think it would be a good idea if you—all of you—would dig up some information you probably have covered up at home and read about the Marshall Plan. Larry Best, Merle Thomas or Genevieve Alley can help you with more information.

ONE OF THE biggest differences about this fair and my fair at home is that no young people participate in it as they do at the Pickaway Fair. But the young farmers are trying very hard to get organized as 4-H Clubs and I believe that soon they will be represented.

At this fair, all the livestock was registered and all were three years old or younger. Horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry are very much the same as ours.

The fair was the most brilliantly-colored I have ever seen. The Danish flag (red with white cross) was on a pole at every exhibit. Can you imagine thirty acres of exhibits with a flag at every one? A color photographer would be in paradise there!!

Then, too, every exhibit had its flowers. It looked as though they had been preparing for a year beforehand.

And there were no free acts or amusements either.

The women's building (and a very small one it was, too) was foods. This type of processing has been used in Denmark in the home for only the last four years. The women were really interested and the men were busy writing down the particulars.

This was on Thursday and I was informed that while there were quite a few people about, tomorrow (Friday) would see the people really come. They did—about 35,000 of them. And they had about the same crowds the next four days.

All day Friday was spent with the taking of pictures by both the still photographer and the men from March of Time.

Also, the Danish state radio station made an 18-minute recording. It will be heard in America some time in September.

AT THIS POINT, American radio men should take a bow. It took us three hours of very unorganized chaos to make that recording.

Some of the pictures were taken in the home economics display. Mrs. Jacour Madsen, the founder of home economics for girls in 1912, was there. Next October, as the result of her hard work, the first college of home economics will open in

Denmark, at the University of Aarhus.

Pictures also were taken which are to appear in the August or September issue of the International Harvester magazine.

Then we went home. March of Time came with us for they wanted movies of farming practices on our island.

Since I was the only woman present, I became the secretary and the official inquirer for all facts.

Without a doubt I know more about Danish agriculture learned in four days than I could have learned in two months.

We had lots of fun making the film and I know you will enjoy it when it is released.

—Betty Jean Riddle.

Recently I visited the horse show in Sonderborg with the Iversons (her hosts). It's called the "Ringriders Show" and is a very unusual test of skill.

A ring about 1½ inches in diameter is suspended from a string stretched between two high poles driven into the ground. The rider has a long, sharp stick about six feet long. He holds it in his left hand and canters up between the two poles and tries to get the ring on the stick. The champion rider for the show got 24 rings in 24 tries. Trophies are given plus money, badges and flowers. Four hundred men and horses were there for the event.

FOR THE KIDDIES, they have all sorts of rides—merry-go-rounds, swings, etc. They look like story book illustrations. One thing that seemed to amuse them was a new type of ride just invented by a German. It was like a barrel which is whirled around by an electric motor. When it reaches a certain speed, the floor drops out and you are left hanging on the wall.

All the time I was at the show, it was pouring rain. But all the Danes continued to walk around, the horse show went on and the amusements were going on full blast. It rains so often here that they stay in it just as if the sun were shining.

Would you like a few Danes for the (Pickaway) Fair in case it rains?

George Peterson is the director for ECA in Denmark and he and his wife and I went to a fair recently in Horsens.

ECA had a Marshall plan exhibit at the fair and we went through it along with our ambassador to Denmark, Mrs.

Anderson.

All had pictures taken. Present was a very active still camera man and a motion picture representative of March Of Time.

Mrs. Anderson is without a doubt one of the most attractive and charming women I have ever met.

The Horsens fair covers thirty acres, and in six acres of that is every kind of machinery you could imagine. . . . Oliver, Case, International Harvester, Ford, Massey Harris, Ferguson, Minneapolis Moline and many others from the U. S., France, England, etc.

All machinery from the U. S. has a sticker showing that it was imported under the Marshall Plan. And without the Marshall Plan, Denmark would not be where it is today.

Ask any Dane.

And they know more about the plan than the average American. . . . and they appreciate what is being done for them.

I think it would be a good idea if you—all of you—would dig up some information you probably have covered up at home and read about the Marshall Plan. Larry Best, Merle Thomas or Genevieve Alley can help you with more information.

ONE OF THE biggest differences about this fair and my fair at home is that no young people participate in it as they do at the Pickaway Fair. But the young farmers are trying very hard to get organized as 4-H Clubs and I believe that soon they will be represented.

At this fair, all the livestock

was registered and all were three years old or younger. Horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry are very much the same as ours.

The fair was the most brilliantly-colored I have ever seen. The Danish flag (red with white cross) was on a pole at every exhibit. Can you imagine thirty acres of exhibits with a flag at every one? A color photograph would be in paradise there!!

Then, too, every exhibit had its flowers. It looked as though they had been preparing for a year beforehand.

And there were no free acts or amusements either.

The women's building (and a very small one it was, too) was foods. This type of processing has been used in Denmark in the home for only the last four years. The women were really interested and the men were busy writing down the particulars.

This was on Thursday and I was informed that while there were quite a few people about, tomorrow (Friday) would see the people really come. They did—about 35,000 of them. And they had about the same crowds the next four days.

All day Friday was spent with the taking of pictures by both the still photographer and the men from March of Time.

Also, the Danish state radio station made an 18-minute recording. It will be heard in America some time in September.

AT THIS POINT, American radio men should take a bow. It took us three hours of very unorganized chaos to make that recording.

Some of the pictures were taken in the home economics display. Mrs. Jacour Madsen, the founder of home economics for girls in 1912, was there. Next October, as the result of her hard work, the first college of home economics will open in

Denmark, at the University of Aarhus.

Pictures also were taken which are to appear in the August or September issue of the International Harvester magazine.

Then we went home. March Of Time came with us for they wanted movies of farming practices on our island.

Since I was the only woman present, I became the secretary and the official inquirer for all facts.

Without a doubt I know more about Danish agriculture learned in four days than I could have learned in two months.

We had lots of fun making the film and I know you will enjoy it when it is released.
